HELPFUL TIPS TO GUIDE YOU THROUGH YOUR FIRST YEAR

So you've seen the movie, The Roommate, and you're freaking out.

Calm down, it was just a movie. The best way to avoid issues between you and your roommate are to set boundaries from the start. Communicating with your roommate will prevent most problems 90% of the time. It is usually great at first, but once you start living in the room for a couple of weeks you begin to notice little quirks that you didn't know were there. For example, he may like to study late and keep the light on, when you like to go to bed early. Communicate! Another example that comes up often, you may have a boyfriend who you loves to be in the room with you and spend the night. Your roommate may not like that. It may seem like she is jealous but it may just be that she is insecure about her body. Communicate! If problems do arise after you've both communicated, go to your RA and tell them what's going on. An RA, What the Heck is That?

An RA is a resident assistant. We are student who live on the hall with you. We are here as a resource for you. A couple of things we do are:

- We conduct one on ones with each resident. We really want to get to know you as a person and what your interests are.
- We put on programs like; Breast Cancer Awareness, Mock-tails, and Floor Wars
- We make creative door decorations to help you feel at home.
- We have floor meetings to help keep you informed and explain residential policies.
- We conduct roommate agreements and mediations. When you come to us with your problems we are there to help. If you and your roommate are having issues please come see us. We can help.

After a summer off, ugh homework again!

No one really loves homework, but it has to be done. PROCRASTINATION is the enemy! It happens to the best of us, especially with all of these great programs going on. If you need a quiet place to study, head to the study rooms in Tate or to the library. The library hours are catered to students. Are you struggling in some classes, there are PASS leaders, Math and History Tutors, and a MLRC Language Center located on the 2nd floor of Schewel Hall to help! Getting low grades on papers, the Writing Center tutors are a big help! The Writing Center is located on the first floor of Hopwood, tutors are also located in Mont & Tate, and the library, those hours will vary. All these resources are available to students. Check your emails!
